

Management Development Program
On
Unlocking your Leadership Skills

31 August - 1 September 2024

Programme Director
Dr. Anubha Dadhich

Introduction (Programme)

Even for the most talented people, becoming a leader is a challenging but worthwhile road of ongoing learning and self-development. No matter how confident you feel capable of handling your new duties, taking on a leadership role for the first time might be intimidating. It might be stressful to shift from concentrating exclusively on the quality of your own work to managing the production of a team and other staff members.

It becomes slightly more difficult when managers are entering into leadership roles for the first time. But appropriate guidance, mentoring and management development programs enable them to unlock the potential of their leadership skills and sail through this transition smoothly. Therefore this program is designed carefully to capture right from very basics of leadership to the creation of self-action plan for managers. The program will provide insights from technical competence to behavioural aspects to empower managers to create their impact in the leadership roles in the organizations.

This program seeks to provide inputs on the topics of:

- What we mean by Leadership?
- Understanding self to lead others.
- Building Technical Competence
- Power & Influence
- Ethics & Value Based approaches to leadership
- Skills for developing others.
- Creating an action plan

Objectives

The program objectives are:

- To enable managers, develop a comprehensive understanding of leadership as a concept.
- To enable managers, develop a comprehensive understanding of self to lead others.
