RAIPUR, Aug 8

CHIEF Minister Vishnu Deo Sai interacted with the students of "Mukhyamantri Sushasan Fellowship" at Mantralaya, Nava Raipur Atal Nagar on Friday.

At present, these students are studying at Indian Institute of Management (IIM) Raipur.

Addressing the "Sushasan Samvad Programme" at Mantralaya today, Chief Minister Sai said that responsibilities fulfilled with honesty and dedication always gives positive results. By being engaged in public service with honesty and dedication, one definitely receives the love and blessings of the people, he added.

Chhattisgarh became the first state of the country as it has set up the Department of Good Governance and Convergence. E-office system has been implemented in the state, due to which all files are being digitised. This has made the functioning of the government transparent and tracking of files has also become easy.

He said that the government's intention is to close all the avenues of corruption. Chief

Chief Minister Vishnu Deo Sai along with Additional Chief Secretary Manoj Kumar Pingua, Secretary Rahul Bhagat, Secretary Avinash Champavat, Special Secretary Rajat Bansal and the students of "Mukhyamantri Sushasan Fellowship" at Mantralaya, Nava Raipur Atal Nagar on Friday.

Minister Sai said that the real good governance is that the people get the actual benefit of the government's schemes. Schemes should be made thoughtfully, because the hard earned money of the people is used behind this.

Only when the schemes are implemented effectively at the ground level, the common people get direct benefits from them, he added.

The students also asked queries from the Chief Minister.

Secretary of Department of Good Governance and Convergence Rahul Bhagat presented a power point presentation on the outline of the Fellowship Scheme.

He said that the objective of the Chief Minister Good Governance Fellowship is to prepare an efficient and responsible administrative generation by providing high level education and practical experience of governance to the talented youth of the state.

Under this scheme, the Chhattisgarh government is running a postgraduate course in Public Policy and Governance in collaboration with the Indian Institute of Management (IIM) Raipur. Selected fellows will also be given opportunities for practical training in various departments of the government.

Bhagat said that the fellows will contribute to important tasks in the governance decision-making process like data-based policy making, simplification of administrative processes, efficient use of resources, strengthening e-governance, and analysis of ground impacts of policies.

Chief Minister Sai released the prospectus of the Chief Minister's Good Governance Fellowship Course. He also presented a copy of the Chhattisgarh Anjan Vision Document to the students.

Additional Chief Secretary Manoj Pingua also guided the students. Secretary of General Administration Department Avinash Champavat, Special Secretary of Department of Good Governance and Convergence Rajat Bansal, Joint Secretary Mayank Agrawal, faculties of IIM and others attended the programme.
